

Pacific Northwest Convening: The 411

What's an LTC Convening? Who will be there? Why should you attend?

Curious about the upcoming LTC Convening in Seattle next year?

Here's the 411.

What| LTC Convenings

An LTC Convening is many things. It's a gathering. An open-invitation conference for Latina/o theatre artists, scholars, and allies. It's the possibility to deepen and forge new relationships. It's a chance to share opinions, insights, and ideas. It's the opportunity to work collectively on a national movement of Latina/o theatre artists.

The first convening was held in Boston in 2013. A small delegation of approximately 80 Latina/o theatre artists and scholars representing various cities and geographical regions met to discuss the state of Latina/o theatre.

At that initial convening the Latina/o Theatre Commons was born. And with it numerous projects that have already come to fruition: the Encuentro festival and this past summer's Carnaval.

There are several projects still in development, including the LTC's El Fuego Committed Production Initiative.

The LTC is coming to Seattle in 2016 for its next convening and is reaching out to Latina/o theatre artists, scholars, and allies in the region to participate.

Who | Latina/o Theatre Artists, Scholars, and Allies

While the convening is open to anyone nationwide, the LTC is very interested in learning about the opportunities and challenges facing Latina/o theatremakers in the Pacific Northwest.

At the convening the LTC will continue a dialogue it began last fall in Dallas, TX—build relationships and start dialogues about the growing national Latina/o Theatre movement.

If you are a Latina/o theatre artist or scholar, or you consider yourself an ally to Latina/o theatremakers—then you are more than welcome to attend! Please note: while the convening is free, you will need to RSVP to attend.

Why | Join the Movement

The LTC is fostering a national movement of Latina/o theatre artists to advocate and support work by Latina/o theatremakers.

Anyone can join the LTC in this work.

The LTC needs your thoughts, ideas, insights, experience, passion, and drive.

Join us at the Seattle Convening to meet your fellow Latina/o theatremakers, to learn about the work of the LTC, and to help shape the LTC's future work.

We hope to see you there!
